

Madam, there's no range like this in the world

See that Damper. It automatically regulates the oven and the fire. It places the Crawford Range in a class by itself.

Those scientifically arranged heat flues distribute the heat evenly in a Crawford Range. You can't have anything but perfect cooking in a Crawford.

The Damper and the Flues make

perfect from a constructional point of view. They give you more oven heat per pound of coal than any other stove on the market. Then there are those interchangeable ash hods! One full of coal, the other receiving the ashes. As one empties the other fills up. One trip to empty the ashes and bring back the coal.

The damper which "bakes," "checks" and "kindles" with one motion!

The flues that distribute the heat evenly—no waste! And there are at least seventeen other Crawford advantages demonstrating why this Range is superior to all others.

I have been selling Crawford Ranges for years, Madam, and I am certain there is no other like it as a life investment for your home. And I'm quite sure no other Range can equal Crawford satisfaction.

Gas Ovens if desired: end (single) or elevated (double).

GHOST DANCE

FOR GEN. PERSHING

Given by Apache Scout for General's Benefit Just Before Departure on Inspection Trip.

Field headquarters, American punitive expedition, Mexico, Sept. 13.—The Apache scouts attached to the American punitive expedition came all the way from El Valle to field headquarters to give a ghost dance for General J. J. Pershing, just before the commander of the expedition left on his recent inspection trip to the border. The dance, weird and picturesque, was witnessed by a thousand soldiers and was held only after painstaking preparations by the Indians.

Prior to his first inspection trip (which took him to El Valle) the general had heard many times of the ghost dance and before leaving for El Valle, had informed Captain James A. Shannon, who has directed the dance, and securing Apache, that he would be pleased to have them perform for him. Communicated to the Indians, the general's request caused great excitement and they insisted on leaving at once for field headquarters.

They passed the general en route and it was only by the exercise of great diplomacy that they were prevented from detaching from their motor trucks and giving their dance on the trail. They were persuaded to continue their trip by furnishing their costumes and securing a new and complete line of vivid paints.

The dance, held the night after General Pershing's return from El Valle, was staged on a level piece of ground inside the lines near "Chinatown." Behind a circle of bales of hay fifty yards in diameter, hundreds of khaki-clad soldiers gathered. The general was seated in a big camp chair on a low platform. A huge fire of logs blazed in the center of the circle, sending showers of sparks and great sheets of flames skyward whenever the zealous Apache fireman dashed gasoline into its roaring vortex.

Long before the general was seated, the fourteen musicians, uniformed according to regulations and seated a short distance from the fire, began their chant. Their soloist, Ietsany, would shout a stanza of perhaps twenty words and his comrades would chant a sort of chorus in guttural rhythm. It was untamed, untrained and altogether primitive.

Accompanying his chant, Ietsany thumped on a makeshift tom-tom—a galvanized iron pail with a wet deer skin stretched across its mouth.

For five minutes the prologue continued, then the ranks of the onlookers parted to admit the dancers. There were five of them—costumed barbarically in trappings and headdresses fashioned by their own hands. John Cody led band, followed by Chow Big, Nonotolth, Saas and Eskibende. Eskibende was the ghost and his role partook something of the clown—a stiff-legged, dignified clown. Of the five, he wore the least clothes. Like the other four he wore a mask, cut from a burlap sack. A small headpiece, braided, clout, made of a stuffed grass dangle and the small of his back, completed his costume. In his hands he carried two red-tipped wands. His body was painted a ghastly gray.

The others were attired more elaborately. Their headgear, carved from wood, painted in bright colors, bespangled with small mirrors and tipped with fluffy white hawk feathers were works of art. Brass studded belts, bits of calico, blankets of vivid hues and a number of small bells that tinkled as they moved, made up the remainder of their dancing clothes.

Entering the area, they filed around the circle in a dignified promenade, all except the ghost, who ambled in the rear, executing grotesque dance steps to the encouraging shouts of the singers.

Warmed by the applause of the spectators, the dancers soon increased their exertions. Around the fire they moved, shuffling, swaying, hopping. The fire light was reflected from the mirrors in their headgear and the brass studs in their belts. Streams of sweat flowed down the naked torsos. The singers changed the motif of their chant and the five dark figures that circled the roaring flames increased their pace. Suddenly the chant ceased, the monotonous thump thump of the tom-tom ended with a long roll and the dancers came to a standstill amid a burst of applause. The first act was over.

Ten times this was repeated, Ietsany chanting industriously, apparently without drawing breath. Toward the last the impressiveness of the spectacle was increased by vivid flashes of lightning from three storms in the surrounding mountains. Their fantastic figures silhouetted against Pajorita mountain by the blinding bolts, the Apaches scored even more heavily than they had expected.

After an hour's exhibition, the dance ended, under orders. Left to themselves, the scouts would have continued for hours, even days, until they were completely exhausted.

No one of the expedition, not even the mentor, Capt. Shannon, knows for what purpose the dance is given nor what is chanted. The dancers dress in secret and hide the accoutrements jealously. Certain steps occur frequently, but what they symbolize is unknown. "They seem to think it's pretty," was the only explanation Captain Shannon could give of the ceremony.

YOU WANT PINK CHEEKS

Every woman wants pink cheeks. They mean not only beauty but health. Then put the color in your cheeks, not on them. The glow of health is the red of healthy blood showing through translucent skin. It is impossible without it. Red blood is the life of a girl's color. Lack of it and looks debilitated, is short of breath, when her heart palpitates after every slight exertion and she has pains in various parts of the body she needs Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They are the remedy best suited to restore the blood, bring brightness to the eyes and put color in the cheeks and lips.

The only other treatment needed costs nothing. It is this. Give the patient plenty of sunlight, moderate exercise every day, not enough to cause fatigue, and use care in the diet because the food craved is often not the best for the condition.

Two books, "Building Up the Blood" and "What to Eat and How to Eat" give just the information that every mother of a growing girl needs. They are free. Write for them today to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or you can send fifty cents for a full-size package.

this year, taught at Goddard three years ago. Since then she has taught at Hebrew Academy. The school is very fortunate in securing her to take up the work here. Parents are asked to consider the advantages of studying music in a school. There is constant training for public work which is of great value to the pupil. On this account there is always an enthusiasm in the work at Goddard which the pupils of the private teacher miss.

Tuition, $12 for a term of 3 months for two lessons a week, in either Piano or Voice. Parents are urged to consult with the Principal about the work.

Resinol Soap

a friend to tender skins

Many ill-made toilet soaps contain free alkali, a harsh chemical which tends to dry and injure the skin or hair. Resinol Soap contains absolutely no free alkali, and it is added the soothing, healing Resinol medication, which doctors have used for over 20 years in treating skin troubles. Thus it comforts tender skins, and helps nature clear the complexion and keep the hair rich, lustrous and free from dandruff. Sold at all druggists and toilet counters.
